Risk factors for 2009-10

- Global financial crisis alleviates very slowly, and financial institutions cannot function as normal, prolonging the global economic recession.
   Unfavorable domestic political changes (such as a parliament
- Unfavorable domestic political changes (such as a parliament dissolution, government resignation, or new violence) would exacerbate the economic situation.
- More severe outbreak of H1N1 flu would hit hard tourism and service

Situation & Outlook

> Situation and Outlook for 2009

- Thai economic growth is projected at -3.0% in 2009, the first contraction since the crisis in 1997/98:
- In 1H09, Thai economy contracted sharply on shrinkage of international trade and eroding consumer and business confidence owing to global crisis and domestic political turmoil. Private investment was postponed. Unemployment increased but less than anticipated.
- In 2H09, economic signs would suggest less gloomy prospects as stimulus measures worldwide, including Thailand, would start taking effect. GDP growth in 4Q 09 would turn positive, supported by early stage of global recovery, domestic stimulus (including SP2investment projects worth Bt1.43 trn in next 3 years), and last year's low base effect.
- Inflation is forecast to be negative in 2009 due to commodity price slump, demand slowdown and the extension of government measure to relieve cost of living until year-end.
- Coupled with easing fiscal policy, accommodative monetary policy may be maintained to help shore up domestic demand.
- Baht (avg.) in 2H09 tends to strengthen slightly from 1H09, backed by economic recovery, capital inflows and C/A surplus.

> Outlook for 2010

- Thai economy would recover gradually with 3.0% growth in 2010.
- In 1H10, Thai exports may improve moderately following slow recovery of global economy and because of a low base in 2009, while government stimulus, led by SP2, would play a major role in reviving domestic demand.
- In 2H10, stronger global recovery, led by US and Asia, may boost Thai exports and tourism. This factor coupled with accelerating government spending and rising confidence would strengthen private consumption and investment growth.

Top Priorities for 2009

- Prudent Risk Discipline / Portfolio Management
- Profitable Growth : Focus remains on growing proportion of consumer loans
- Providing stronger support to SME and corporate banking customers
- Maintain strong liquidity
- Continue to take advantage of inorganic growth opportunity
